This opera, famous for its clever and delicate pantomime, is set in the Ming dynasty (1368-1644). A beautiful young maiden, Sun Yujiao, lives with her widowed mother in a small town where they raise chickens to support themselves. When her mother leaves home one day to visit a temple, Sun Yujiao comes out of doors, feeds the chickens, and sits down to sew the soles on her slippers. A handsome young nobleman, Fu Peng, catches a glimpse of Sun Yujiao and is immediately smitten. On the pretext of buying some of the chickens, Fu Peng approaches to flirt with her. Feigning annoyance, Sun Yujiao goes indoors to conceal her attraction to him. Before leaving, Fu Peng drops his jade bracelet and hides around a corner. When she reemerges, Sun Yujiao finds that the handsome stranger has left, but she discovers that he has dropped his bracelet. She bends over to pick up the jade bracelet and, discretely slips it on. Seeing this, Fu Peng
